

[4]

A face is detected in an image or video that is processed by its unique facial features

These facial features are then compared with known faces in a database allowing for identification

Facial Recognition Software