Students should become familiar with the workings of the electoral process; the role of money and interest groups on campaigns; the laws governing elections; and the way individual campaigns operate on the local, state, and national level.

Materials

Maps, charts, and graphs of electoral outcomes and political participation; charts showing the role of money in politics; contemporary news and Internet coverage and analysis of elections and campaigns; discussion of exit poll data. [SC9]

Special Assignment—Elections: The class will divide into Democrats and Republicans. Those who choose to identify with neither party will choose one for the sake of the project. Each party will plan a campaign for a mock presidential election. Each party should choose its candidate and running mate. Each party should also use some combination of the following campaign positions: campaign manager, policy advisors, media consultants, ad specialists, speechwriters, logistics managers, and any other positions deemed necessary by the campaign manager. This project will be given both a group and an individual grade. Individual grades will be given by the instructor after reading evaluations completed by the campaign manager. The group grade depends upon winning the election. In every election, there is a winner and a loser. Unfortunately, the best campaign does not always win. Welcome to politics.

Writing Component

Students must answer numerous free-response questions with essays that demonstrate their ability to analyze and interpret the structure and actors within American government and politics. These essays prepare you for the essay section of the AP U.S. Government and Politics Exam. Essays are given in class and in take-home format, and they are due approximately every one to two weeks. Some example assignments: [SC13]

SC13—The course requires students to answer analytical and interpretive free response questions on a frequent basis.

1. On-Demand (Timed) Writing: Using the following court cases as examples, explain the evolution of federalism in the United States. Be sure to explain the facts of each case as they apply to federalism.
 - McCulloch v. Maryland
 - Gibbons v. Ogden
 - Brown v. Board of Education
 - Printz v. U.S., Mack v. U.S.
2. Transactive Writing: Write a letter to your senator or representative urging support or opposition to the Patriot Act. A successful transactive piece must show a clear and timely purpose and be written in appropriate language for the intended audience.
3. Book Review: Each student must read one book on modern politics. Students with conservative ideologies must read a book written by a more liberal author. Students with liberal ideologies must read a book written by a more conservative author. Your book review should be approximately two pages in length and should include the following:
 - A brief summary of the book, including specific examples taken from the book
 - An analysis of the author's purpose in writing the book, including evidence used by the author to support his or her position
 - An evaluation of the validity of the arguments—are they logical? Are they convincing?
 - A recommendation of this book—to whom would you recommend this book and why?
