AP® COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS 2013 SCORING GUIDELINES

Question 3

3 points

One point is earned for a correct description of the difference between a revolution and a coup d'état.

Acceptable descriptions include:

- A revolution is an uprising of the masses, and a coup d'état is conducted by military forces.
- A revolution encompasses a large number of people, while a coup d'état comprises few individuals.
- Revolutions result in regime change, and a coup d'état often leads to military rule.
- Revolutions involve fundamental change, and a coup results in change of leadership.
- Revolutions often last for long periods of time, and a coup d'état occurs over a short period of time.

Note: Difference must be along the same trait.

One point is earned for correctly identifying Nigeria as the country where there has been several successful coups d'état.

One point is earned for correctly describing a political consequence of coups d'état in Nigeria.

Acceptable descriptions include:

- Loss of legitimacy of government.
- Great political instability because of the coups.
- Government controlled by military for a number of years.
- Hindered development of democratic institutions.
- Reduced trust in military.
- A formal effort to reduce incentives for coups d'état such as:
  - o establishing a new constitution in 1999
  - o the election of former general Obasanjo as the first president under the new constitution
  - o enactment of a law that forced the retirement of military officers who had held political office

Note: The timeline for political consequence has to be accurate.

A score of zero (0) is earned for an off-task answer or an attempted answer that merits no points.

A score of dash (—) is earned for a blank answer.

3. Describe one major difference between a revolution and a coup d'état. Identify a country in the AP Comparative Government and Politics course where there have been several successful coups d'état in the past 50 years. Describe a political consequence of the coups d'état in the country you identified.
A resolution is an arethrow of a contrary's basic institutions whereas a onto d'eat is an aventron of a regime's leader, not its institutions.
Migra has experienced several coup d'etaz averthe past 50 years.
most resulting in military dictatoriships, suppressed civil liberties and agost, and painted paisings in which the dictora & was aventioned in yet according cop d'etat. Coup d'etate ultimately result in las ignimal reases people du't believe their greatment is stable though to had another one offer Sirb is the case in Nigeria.

3.	Describe one major difference between a revolution and a coup d'état. Identify a country in the AP Comparative
	Government and Politics course where there have been several successful coups d'état in the past 50 years.
	Describe a political consequence of the coups d'état in the country you identified.

a revalution v3 usvally ted By the People and usually forms a government Bersed on the people's rule whereas a corp d'état is a military le à repetion and will inevitably form a willder & stade 15, ently and horidaring
IN MISELLO ON COUP D'état requilitaire way of keeping the Servicement 183 itamens
these militar a coup's Vsually Conse more Problems then sulutions But they often in viscina at least Do vidmately form a new lepublic

Unauthorized copying or reuse of any part of this page is illegal.

GO ON TO THE NEXT PAGE.

Government and Politics course where there have been several successful coups d'état in the past 50 years. Describe a political consequence of the coups d'état in the country you identified. major difference between a revolution and d'état is a coup d'état advocates the ourthour basic institutions whereas a revolution doesn't Nigeria has had several successfu Consequence is gitimacy and is much more unstable than it Sucresstal John Several

3. Describe one major difference between a revolution and a coup d'état. Identify a country in the AP Comparative

Unauthorized copying or reuse of any part of this page is illegal.

AP® COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS 2013 SCORING COMMENTARY

Question 3

Overview

The intent of this question was to assess students' understanding of revolution and coup d'état and to describe the real-world results of coups d'état in a specific country. The skills tested were conceptual and descriptive. The students had three specific tasks: to describe one major way that a revolution differs from a coup d'état, to identify the country studied in the AP Comparative Government and Politics course that has experienced several successful coups d'état in the past half century, and to describe one political result of the coups in this country.

Sample: 3A Score: 3

The response earned 1 point for correctly describing a difference between revolution and coup d'état by stating that a "revolution is an overthrow of a regime's basic institutions whereas a coup d'état is an overthrow of a regime's leader, not its institutions."

The response earned 1 point for correctly identifying Nigeria as the country studied in the AP Comparative Government and Politics course that has experienced several successful coups d'état in the past 50 years.

The response earned 1 point for describing a correct political consequence of coups d'état in Nigeria by stating that often military coups in Nigeria resulted "in military dictatorships, suppressed civil liberties and rights".

Sample: 3B Score: 2

The response earned 1 point for correctly describing a difference between revolution and coup d'état by stating that a "revolution is usually Led [sic] By [sic] the people", while describing a coup d'état as a "military led rebellion".

The response earned 1 point for correctly identifying Nigeria as the country studied in the AP Comparative Government and Politics course that has experienced several successful coups d'état in the past 50 years.

The response did not earn a point for its description of a political consequence of coups d'état in Nigeria because the description is incorrect.

Sample: 3C Score: 1

The response did not earn a point for its description of a major difference between revolution and coup d'état because the description is incorrect.

The response earned 1 point for correctly identifying Nigeria as the country studied in the AP Comparative Government and Politics course that has experienced several successful coups d'état in the past 50 years.

The response did not earn a point for its description of a political consequence of coups d'état in Nigeria because the description is incorrect.