Students access their scores at apscore.org.

Your Scores

You may access your AP scores on Monday, July 8, 2013, beginning at 5 a.m. Eastern Daylight Time. If you need to send your scores to colleges by July 15, visit apscore.org to find the early-access day when you can sign in, and view and send your scores. If it's your early access day, select the button below.

View your scores

- Remember: you must use your College Board account and your AP number or student ID number to access your scores.
- If you have any questions about viewing or sending your scores, visit Help.

About AP Scores

Completing an AP course and exam is a huge accomplishment. You should feel very proud about the work you've done and the skills you've learned. Your AP score is one way to share this accomplishment with others, like colleges and universities. The final exam score is reported on a scale of 1–5 and shows how well you've mastered the content of the course.

Reminders

If you want to withhold one or more of your scores, change the score recipient, or cancel scores before this year's scores are reported, AP Services must receive your written request by June 15. Learn how to order these services.

Most colleges in the U.S. grant credit for AP scores.

After clicking 'View your scores,' students will be prompted to log in using their College Board account.

Tips for easy score access:

1. It's best if students sign up for a College Board account before scores become available. They can do so at any time at apscore.org.
2. We encourage students to provide the same email on their AP answer sheet that they use for their College Board account.
3. Hint: Some students may already have a College Board account if they've registered for the SAT or participated in other College Board programs. Encourage them to sign in to their account to make sure they remember their username/password.

- In order to be matched to their scores, students will need to enter either their AP number OR the student ID number they entered on their AP answer sheet.
 - If students don't have their AP number, they can have it emailed to them by clicking the link. Student ID numbers are unique identifiers assigned by the school, district, or state. If students don't know or remember their student ID number, they should use their AP number.

Please enter ONE of the following:

After completing the login process and accepting AP Scores Terms and Conditions, students will see their cumulative score report with scores for all of the exams they have taken unless they have withheld or canceled scores. In certain situations, scores may be delayed; that information will be noted on the students' reports.

Please note that if students did not create their College Board account with the same email address that they entered on their AP answer sheet, they may not be able to access all of their scores.

The main content area features a 'View Your Scores' heading and a congratulatory message: 'Congratulations! By taking challenging AP courses and exams, you're preparing yourself to succeed in college and beyond.' To the right, there are sections for 'What's Next?' with links to learn about credit and score reporting, and 'Reminders' about sending scores to colleges. A prominent orange button asks 'Ready to send your scores to colleges?'. Below this, the scores for 2013 are listed: English Literature and Composition (score: --, delayed) and Spanish Literature and Culture (score: 2). The scores for 2012 are also listed: French Language and Culture (score: 3) and World History (score: 5). A search bar is visible in the top right corner.

The image shows a screenshot of the apscore.org website. A modal dialog box is centered on the screen, overlaid on a dark background of the website's interface. The dialog box has a white background and a thin border. In the top right corner of the dialog, there is a "CLOSE" button with a small 'x' icon. The main heading of the dialog is "Do you need to send your scores?" in a bold, black font, followed by a horizontal line. Below the heading, there are two paragraphs of text. The first paragraph is a reminder about "bubbling" college codes. The second paragraph is a disclaimer about credit card usage. At the bottom of the dialog, there is a checkbox with a hand cursor icon next to it, followed by the text "I have read this notice and want to send my score(s) using this service." To the right of this text are two buttons: a light blue "Cancel" button and an orange "Continue >" button. The background of the website is dark grey and contains some blurred text and navigation elements.

Do you need to send your scores?

Reminder: If you "bubbled" a college code on your AP answer sheet this year, your scores will be sent to that college free of charge. However, if you want to send scores to other colleges or scholarship programs for a fee, continue.

By using this service and providing your credit card you acknowledge and agree that your credit card will be charged. The College Board will not use this card for any other purpose and will not store the credit card number in our system.
